

Training partners who prepare students for life in the real world

PLUMBING, electrical and renewable-energy students at New Career Skills have begun to benefit from its first alliance with a business partner.

The company has agreed a partnership with the Low Cost Group, which offers fixed-fee accountancy services and van hire on flexible terms.

It means New Career Skills students and graduates will benefit from enhanced benefits and exclusive money-saving offers as a result when starting up their own businesses or entering the world of work when they graduate.

Business manager, Clare Williamson, who only joined the firm in January, has been busy forging partnerships with other organisations to help students when they complete their training.

The partnership with Low Cost Group began with the first of a series of free business forums aimed at helping them into work when they complete their courses.

The free advice sessions took place at New Career Skills' bases in Chandler's Ford and Doncaster.

"As well as the business forums, we have Tim Veal, career development manager at New Career Skills, Lee Noble, Kaley Smith and Clare Tucker, all from Low Cost Group, and Clare Williamson, business manager at New Career Skills, at the first workshop launched a series of free master-class training workshops, aimed at keeping students and graduates up-to-date about new technology and the commercial benefits of entering the renewables market," said Clare.

"Both of these initiatives show how we are committed to continuing the support and ongoing professional development we offer to students both present and past."

Clare has also launched New Career Search, a website that offers graduates information, essential services, advice and support as they look to either gain work or set up on their own.

"This is part of making sure that New Career Skills leads the market with a fantastic training programme and with the New Career Search service and website we will equip our students with the information, knowledge and confidence to start up their own businesses and make their career change a success."

For further information, ring 01424 773650 or visit www.newcareerskills.co.uk.